Multi-Language Text Editor Highlights code with a syntax highlighter and project explorer Supports languages as C, C++, HTML, JS, LESS, CSS, XML and more Import or export projects through drag&drop Multi-language text editor. It highlights code with a syntax highlighter and project explorer.Q: Is "covering" all the relations with the same technique by its definition? Let  $SRS$  be a relation in a set  $S$ .  $f:U \rightarrow U$  a function and  $R = \{(u, f(u)) \mid u \in U\}$ . Is it true that  $SRS$  is also a relation in  $S$  or not? I mean,  $SRS$  is a relation in  $S$ , but I am having a hard time thinking of an example in which  $SRS$  is not always covering. Is there a counterexample? A: Yes, you can take  $S = \{1, 2, 3\}$  and  $SRS$  to be the empty relation, and  $f$  to be the identity function. Then  $R = \{(1, 2), (2, 3), (1, 3)\}$ . 2 and 8 years, while for the older groups these differences are not so evident. The trend of higher prevalence of viral infections and the presence of more liver cirrhosis cases is due to the consumption of alcohol and the increase in the prevalence of the HGV-2. The results of the studied population confirm that HCV genotype 1 has a wide spread and its prevalence increases with age. The prevalence of genotype 3 is very low in our population, being in the lowest range of the studies worldwide. The genotypes 2 and 4 are present in 2% of the cases and 2.5% of the patients with chronic infection are coinfecting with HGV-1 and 2. In the patients positive for the HGV-2 a high prevalence of coinfection with HCV was obtained. The patients who practice sexual intercourse were more infected with HBV in comparison with the population of Roma pregnant women: 12.5% vs. 1.1%, respectively (p \
