The long list of features and effects that appear in Photoshop is no indication that it is the be all and end all of image editing programs. If you are looking for a simple image manipulation tool, GIMP or a dedicated photo editor like picasso might be a good choice for you. If you need to edit color images, you can explore using photo-editing apps for Android (including many free apps), your computer, and an iPad or other tablet. Apps for each device vary in terms of which features are available and what kind of effect they can produce. For instance, iPhoto's editing tools offer a suite of effects for photos that include but are not limited to effects similar to those in Photoshop. The web-based programs that connect a mobile device to a computer can save images to your device or other remote locations. Getting Started with Photoshop The interface (or view) of Photoshop is fairly complex; it can be intimidating at first. Photoshop's options are designed to be easy to use by the photo professional but may be challenging to the average user who lacks expertise in technical aspects of the tool. Photoshop's user interface and dialog boxes are full of terms and subheadings (as shown in Figure 4-1). The interface is organized into tabs so that you can navigate through the tasks for the day. Figure 4-1: Use the tabs at the top of the screen to navigate the interface. The layers (Step 1) provide a layered image. The layers can be moved, moved, and sized (or scaled). They also have options for changing the opacity of the image: When an image is composed of layers, the amount of transparency is proportional to how many layers are below the final image. The Layer Mask tools and the Facetune tools let you adjust the brightness, contrast, and saturation of the layer. The color (Step 2) is the grayscale or RGB content of the photo that you will work with. If the image was taken on a white background, the color is usually white. If you click the Adjust Color button, a dialog box appears to let you adjust the color settings. The color and layer settings are linked.

Any changes you make to the color settings affect the layer. This makes it possible to do things like change the color of a photo and its background color and then use layer masking to make the color of the background transparent to reveal the photo underneath. The tools (Step 3)

South Korea's Constitutional Court has ruled that the president and his running mate were elected unlawfully, due to "irregularities" in the voting system. They were elected unopposed, and both have been declared to be invalid. This means Park Geun-hye can start her six-year term as president, but her ally will assume the role of acting president. Opposition parties are making plans to challenge the validity of both elections. On Monday, South Korea's Constitutional Court ordered a special parliamentary election for the position of acting president. It also ordered a re-run of the presidential election, however the latter, which incumbent Park secured, is now regarded as legitimate. Media playback is unsupported on your device

A coalition of opposition parties called the Democratic Party says it has evidence that North Korea may have provided political support for a "dirty election". Moon Jae-in's party says they have proof that North Korean hackers have been involved, via its infamous Lazarus virus. Both Moon and the former president, Park, deny the allegations. Jung Yeon-jeong, head of the Constitutional Court, said the election result had been "tainted by cheating and violation of the law".

parties did not formally take part - were illegal. The CDEC, a civic group that opposes Mr Moon and another opposition candidate, also presented documents allegedly showing he had been "illegally" elected. During the presidential election, the CDEC alleged that hundreds of thousands of forged blank ballots were used to vote in favour of the incumbent. The election commission has denied any such vote-rigging, and says more than three million people voted. "It's not the first time the CDEC has made such allegations, but we will all decide what to do with them," president-elect Moon said on Monday. Who is the new president? Acting president Hwang Kyo-ahn will serve until a new presidential election can be held, on 20 December. The ruling Saenuri
