Access all contentQ: Cannot Install Node.js 4.x On Windows 10 Trying to install Node.js using the MSI with the same prerequisites as seen here The installation succeeds until I run the cmd in a test environment, upon which it fails with the following: @Windows/Cmd.exe(1596,0x40ec2) The system cannot find the file specified. I have attempted to run the cmd as administrator and the bat file containing the msifix command as admin, but without success. Note that all the machines with which I have tested have Node.js already installed. A: The above solution worked, but if anyone else runs into this issue, here is how I got it working: 1. Open regedit and navigate to: HKEY_LOCAL_MACHINE\SYSTEM\CurrentControlSet\Control\Session Manager\Environment You should see a key named "PATH" there, with its value set to a semi-colon-delimited list of directories. If not, create the key as it stands. 2. Navigate to the above key, and create a new key called NODE32, with a value of: %APPDATA%\Microsoft\Windows\CurrentVersion\Uninstall\NODE_{COMPANY}.MSI.dll;C:\Node.js-v4.6.1-Win32\ This key was created in the above screenshot. 3. Close regedit, and re-run the installer. The mediastinal course of the left main bronchus. In the present study, the course of the left main bronchus was examined in 50 human bodies that were fixed in 10% formalin solution. A radiographic card containing the course of the left main bronchus was developed by viewing each body on a screen for 8 h at intervals ranging from 1 h to 5 days. The card revealed the exact course of the left main bronch
