

In 2K's studio, we got our hands on the new motion capture technology to see what the data analysis looks like, learn what it's good for and answer some questions about the potential in game play. Accompanying the demo disc is a developer diary that provides a little more insight into how the data is extracted and how it's being used in the game. The commentary is done in-game, where players can be heard explaining how they use the data and how they might alter gameplay to compensate for their specific skill set. FIFA Fanatik Senior Editor Daimo "Face" Conti attended the event and shared his thoughts on the demo. The EA SPORTS Frostbite engine had a good track record in FIFA titles up to this point, but so does 2K Sports in its simulation engine. Speaking of which, what will you be taking from FIFA 22 Crack that's different to the past FIFA games? I think one of the biggest things in FIFA is that it has now been going for 14 years. From the first FIFA title, it felt quite realistic, and if you thought it was very realistic, it was. However, one thing that I never had was that 'Wow factor,' that little 'wow' factor that makes the game pop, and when it's on the pitch. We really wanted to do some things to try and improve that, so we went for a more authentic feel. For me, the animations are the biggest thing. It looks much more lifelike than it used to be. You can have a really dull, very real-looking animation, and the characters don't always reflect that, but I think the animations are the biggest thing from FIFA 20. We also made a lot of improvements to the crowd. They're much more responsive and much more authentic than they used to be. We tried not to make the crowd too overpowering, but we also wanted to make sure that they didn't all be standing in one place. There were a few things we did to try and make them feel a bit more alive. Also, the crowd never stops cheering, which I think has always been a great and unique feature of the FIFA experience. There are also things like crowd animation we added, which I think is really cool. I think that's a great factor because it really feels like they're loving the game on the pitch. FIFA 20 did a good job of increasing the passing AI, but not enough players can pass

Fifa 22 Features Key:

- Live out your dreams as both a manager and a player in FIFA 22, where you define your own path.
- HyperMotion Technology powers the highly-anticipated FIFA gameplay engine, including every tackle, edge of your foot and shot, displayed on a new "Element" panel that makes up the main HUD. See the ball from your opponent's point of view, the defender's telltale signs of anticipating your next move, the referee's angle of call and the block that was missed in slow motion.
- A comprehensive new single player experience, featuring replay modes inspired by FIFA Ultimate Team.
- A new Career Mode, where your Pro's story-line and scenarios are shaped by a new player-driven experience.
- Spend your FIFA Ultimate Team GPs to unlock your players' Ultimate Edges.
- FIFA is the first football game to feature gameplay specific to the Pitch, with the Community Team recovering throws from dead balls and maintaining possession after unsuccessful throw-ins.
- New 3D player models, for players of all heights, and improved appearance-based facial animations.
