The Japanese garden is lined with two rows of deciduous trees, providing shade and a welcome breeze in the summer. The muted colors remind me of old world farms. Simple architectural forms with a line of trimmed boxwood give the garden its structure, and punctuated by a central fountain, it has the character of a small public park. Photography by @tigercrew Do you ever visit a garden or landscape you think to yourself "that could have been my garden, my design?" Have you ever imagined a home garden or landscape in a community or a city? Do you think you will ever build a garden with that in mind? Let's go back to the year 2003 and
