The little hetalia multiple rape of the high seas
As soon as Sienna woke up she felt awful. She quickly rubbed her eyes and then sat up in bed. There were blurry shapes all around her. Slowly she stood up. "How's you feeling?" Dee asked, "I'd love some chocolate milk, a few porno magazines to read, and some curling irons if you've got them." "Thanks for asking," Sienna responded, as she looked around the large bathroom. For a few moments she had no idea what was going on. Yesterday was the last day of her sophomore year at the prestigious Radcliffe College in Boston. "Where are we?" she asked as she opened one of the medicine cabinet doors. There was a glass of water and something soft in her hand. She looked down and saw that there was a condom on the floor. "You spent the night at my apartment. It's where I live," Dee told her as she hopped up onto the mirror. "How did you get here?!" Sienna questioned, "You don't have a car. I thought you were here for the summer. Are you going home?" "It's the middle of December," Dee said proudly, "Spring and summer are over. It's time to hit the ski slopes, work out, and drink beer." "You're a frat dude," Sienna responded, frustrated that the night was so rushed. “You’d better believe I’m a frat dude,” Dee proclaimed as he grabbed the condom off the floor, “I’m not letting you back inside this college again until you have sex with me.” Sienna was now a little irritated. Dee had known her since freshman year and she trusted him; that was why she left her underwear at his apartment. She stepped back and saw the familiar, double door of the bathroom. It was locked. When she turned to look at Dee, he was in mid-snowboard. “I think you should be cleaning that up,” she told him as she pointed to the condom. “I don’t think Differentiation of clinically relevant and unspecific leucocidin-producing Staphylococcus aureus. The leucocidin-harbouring genes lukS-lukF and scn, the latter encoding the surface-associated protein clumping factor A, were transferred separately or in combination via the staphylococcal pathogenicity island (SaPI1) into S. aureus RN4220, a SaPI1-negative derivative of S. aureus 8325-4. No recombination was observed between the pathogenicity island and the clumping factor-encoding gene. By using a specific polymerase chain reaction, however, the recipient strain 8325-4 served as a host for the SaPI1, thereby potentially enabling the spread of pathogenicity islands. Both clumping factor-encoding genes were able to restore in all of the recombinant strains the ability to form alpha-toxin-induced clumping and to induce leucocidin-mediated skin lesions in mice. However, only SaPI1-encoded clumping factor A appeared to be capable of inducing dermatitis on mice injected intradermally.
