Hits: 339987 Release Date: October 13, 2017 Play Time: PS4(TBC) Base Game Price: $39.99Autoimmune pancreatitis and other auto-immune disorders in patients with Hashimoto thyroiditis. Autoimmune pancreatitis (AIP) is an unusual disease whose hallmark is the presence of serum IgG4-related sclerosing diseases in the pancreas. In a retrospective analysis, we studied 8 cases with Hashimoto thyroiditis (HT) and associated pancreatic disorders. The records of 8 patients (5 men and 3 women, age 54-74 years) with HT and pancreatic disorders were reviewed. Exclusion criteria were: lack of follow-up (n=1), non-characteristic laboratory findings (n=6), and no pathological sample at the time of the diagnosis (n=2). All patients presented with obstructive jaundice (n=6) or abdominal pain (n=2). Serum IgG4 levels were increased (>117 mg/dl) in all the patients at HT diagnosis (n=8). Pancreatic biopsy showed granulocytic infiltrate and fibrosis, interstitial thickening and expansion of the ducts, multinucleate giant cells and/or fibrosis. In 1 case, immunohistochemical staining was positive for IgG4 and in all cases the diagnosis of AIP was established, and specific therapy was started. Histology for all cases showed fibrosis in the glandular epithelia of the pancreas, that was mild and associated with periductal fibrosis in 3/7. In the remaining 4/7, the fibrosis was moderate and multifocal, surrounded by hyperplastic acini and ducts. In the last patient the pattern of multinucleate giant cells (MNC) was suggestive of a pre-AIP. The 6 patients that improved after thyroidectomy had moderate to severe fibrosis with MNC, which decreased after surgery (n=4) or were resolved (n=2). This was not observed in the 2 remaining patients that did not improve after surgery. AIP presents clinical features similar to other sclerosing pancreatitis. HT is often associated with pancreatic lesions in patients with HT. Serum IgG4 level is increased, and MNC pattern may be present at the time of HT diagnosis. In some patients with a pre-AIP, thyroidectomy is helpful and anti-

But Friday night, four current pros were on hand at the Samsung Sensation on Concourse B of Tulsa International Airport for the NBA All-Star Celebrity Game. An unseasonably warm, but not to the outside temperature, has been the climate at the airport for the last few days. But with temperatures in the 50s on Friday, we had no trouble finding any non-skin-to-skin activity for two of the four players. Meanwhile, the other two, Carmelo Anthony and Jwan Howard, looked like they would rather be back home in a Chicago alley, shirtless, talking trash to each other. Anthony was in the house of the host, while Howard was in the house of Rockets coach Rick Adelman, but neither could have turned down the invitation to the celebrity game. It was the first celebrity game the Rockets have played in three years. After their last game, Adelman went around the Rockets locker room stating that he didn't want to be in the same room as Kobe Bryant. He looked like he regretted that decision Friday. Maybe a little too much. Bryant and fellow NBA All-Stars Chris Bosh, Tim Duncan and Ray Allen were the announced captains, and they brought a lot of energy to the court. The game was played as if it were a celebrity volleyball game, with a lot of 4-on-4 basketball, but the captains were allowed to call passes to a teammate who was farther to the basket. Bryant used that all-too-easy option more than anyone else. The Rockets got lost in the game in the first half, going
