I have a string (names), such as "George". If I just want to see if it contains whitespace (spaces, tabs, newlines, etc.), how do I find that out? I'd like an expression like "if (names[i] == whitespace), but that doesn't work, since it compares the string to the type of thing it's comparing it to (in this case, a string), not to whitespace. A: The "whitespace" string you're trying to compare to, is in fact, a char*, since "space" is a constant character (of type char), and from there, you can easily check if the string is empty (no characters) if (names[i] == '\0') { } To avoid the above problem, you can use strcmp #include int main(int argc, char argv[]) { char string1 = "George"; char* string2 = " "; if (strcmp(string1, string2) == 0) { printf("the strings are equal "); } else { printf("the strings are not equal ");

According to the Webster's Dictionary; Dissonance is "a state of disagreement, conflict, or inconsistency; one that causes a change in behavior, aim, attitude, or feeling, as in the intensity of grief, arousal or pain". Dissonance is like the Missing link in the Real Estate Business. The Dissonance caused by transaction costs is 1% to 2% of the value of the transaction. The Dissonance in the negotiation process is 10%. Most of us know the consequences of the Dissonance in our day to day life. There are different methods to deal with this Dissonance. One of them is the use of the verbal "Win/ Lose" Agreement. There are some advantages to the Win/ Lose Agreement. One of the ways to resolve Dissonance is the use of Win/ Lose Agreements. The reason is simple and practical. It is an effective strategy in the real estate business. In most of the cases, as we use this strategy, we end up with Agreements on almost all the decisions that are more or less clear. But the more we think about it the more clear the whole process becomes. 1) "Don't discuss." In most of the cases, the seller wants to establish if we are the one to sell and if we are the one to sell. Instead of wasting your time with too many discussions about every single deal.
