While it is true that a glass of plain water and a handful of almonds are low in carbohydrates, there are other ways to get the essential carbohydrates your body needs. These are some of the best ways to get a healthy amount of carbohydrates without eating bread, pasta or rice: Sweet potatoes White potatoes Celery Carrot Broccoli Lettuce Onions Mushrooms Cauliflower Asparagus Eggs The more fiber in your diet, the better, with all fiber coming from plants. The problem with a lot of carbohydrates is that they're converted into glucose, your body's primary energy source. Plant-derived carbohydrate sources are rich in fiber, whereas the protein from animal-based sources is rich in amino acids. Fiber passes through the digestive system more slowly than protein. Fiber also helps to provide you with a feeling of fullness, meaning you eat less as compared with when you have whole grains or other carbohydrates sources. Finally, fiber aids in preventing heart disease, obesity, diabetes and other diseases because it's not easy for the body to break down. So, by no means are carbohydrates like white bread, pasta, rice, potatoes, pastries and candy. They are simply bad for you and actually do more harm than good. Why? Because they digest quickly and only provide you with a high-glycemic response. They don't provide you with a
