There are a lot of reasons a traveler needs a tablet on an airplane. The Kindle Fire is the best of the Kindle tablets to date, and that's no surprise. The Fire is a full-featured Kindle with voice-enabled functions, plenty of storage for books, movies, and apps, and an excellent UI that makes it easy to navigate. The Fire also has a feature called Cover, which allows you to flip the device around so you can see the screen from all angles without having to dig around in your bag. For the womens list, we went with the Aer Travel Pack 3 Small. Its the 28 liter model of the Travel Pack 3 the latest iteration of one of our favorite bags. You can always size up to the 35 liter if you want, though we find this size a lot more comfortable on a smaller frame. The harness system has well-cushioned straps and load lifters to help keep the weight off your shoulders. Theres also an option to add a hip belt, though its sold separately. The deep bucket shape makes it easy to pack cubes and pouches. For everything else, theres the front compartment with plenty of liner pockets for smaller gear, and a couple of other sneaky compartments, like a designated spot for storing an AirTag. We like this pack because its professional look wont single you out as a tourist, though most bags around this size will work. A good thing to keep in mind here is the TSAs 3-1-1 security rule for flying with carry-on liquids. This rule may differ from country to country, but in most major countries and definitely the U.S. it means each passenger can bring aboard a one-quart plastic bag with 3.4 ounce/100ml bottles of liquids inside it. You can take as many bottles as you want, as long as they're all under 3.4 ounces and fit inside that plastic bag. So, needless to say, solid items are a great choice. Plus, you'll never have to worry about a soap bar exploding in your backpack.

We like pairing slings with travel packs because they allow quick access to daily essentials. The Aer Day Sling 3 has a spot for everything. Keep your passport in the back pocket for extra security. Meanwhile, the front pocket is great for keys and sunglasses. For everything else, the main compartment has plenty of pockets and panels to keep a power bank, wallet, playing cards, and more. This functions as our personal item for air travel and days out on the town. Keep it tight to your chest while in transit or loosen the strap and have it closer to your hip for a more casual look. Regardless of how you wear it, this sling holds your travel essentials and looks good doing it. It even fits a Nintendo Switch. Everything else we talk about in this video fits in this backpack and sling combo. For the womens list, we went with the Aer Travel Pack 3 Small.
