the 3d atomic structures of apoptin and bcr-abl were drawn by chimera (<http://www.cgl.ucsf.edu/chimera/>). the atomic structures of apoptin were used as the initial structures in a molecular dynamic simulation. molecular dynamics simulation was performed on the apoptin and bcr-abl structures using an atom-based force field. the molecular dynamic simulation was run in a potential energy surface consisting of a gradually increasing number of models, ranging from 4 to 20th order. the number of models was increased until the smallest curvature in the potential energy landscape was identified. this smallest curvature indicated the final equilibrium. after the equilibrium calculations, the interactions between apoptin and bcr-abl were analyzed using a schematic diagram produced using graphpad prism 5.0. to analyze the interaction, the hydrogen bonds between the interacting residues were identified by chimera and verified by pymol (<http://www.pymol.org/>). fujitsu scigress explorer ultra 7.7.0.47.
