What's New In?

AbleFtp is a freeware and open-source tool, implemented in Java, that acts as an FTP client that is designed to automate the transfer of files. It has a friendly and user-friendly interface, which makes it easy to understand. For instance, the user can see the difference between an upload and a download operation, the number of files that have been sent or received and the speed of each. Key features: 1) FTP Client The goal of the application is to make the transfer of files a more flexible and easier experience. There are plenty of features that make it possible to do things automatically, thus saving the time and effort of a user. The first important feature of the application is the scheduling of tasks and options that allow the user to schedule the upload or download of files. Scheduling does not allow for a regular operation to take place but for a task to run at a certain time, thus automatically, so that the user can focus on other tasks. There is no way to directly schedule the task as it is a case of selecting the type of operation as an added feature. Once a task has been created, the user can determine the settings for each operation, the way it is to be done and the completion time for the task. The details provided for each operation are as follows: • Activity: The activity is the task that will be performed. The choices of activity are pretty much the same as the operation types. Moreover, there are sub-categories that are related to what can be done. File transfer, scanning, copying, editing and moving are just a few of the tasks that a user can be assigned. Moreover, there is a category for restoring files, such as scanning. • Location: The location refers to the drive, folder or any other location where the file can be transferred to. The location also includes the frequency that the operation is to be carried out (daily, weekly, monthly, annually) and the amount of time that it will be stored. • Options: The options are pretty much similar to the locations, thus the options are the way the operation will be done. The options depend on the activity selected. For instance, if you are scheduling a file transfer, you can select a location and set the time and frequency of the operation. If you are assigning an operation to a file copying, you can decide whether to overwrite the existing file, the way the operation is going to be done and other options. • Time: You have the ability to set the completion time for the task. The users can schedule the time up to the second, minute, hour or any other time that can be decided
