After installing the Optic Nerve companion app, you can import Optic Nerve images from your camera phone to your computer. The app is free, and Optic Nerve director Greg Wajynski told me that it is based on the same camera-phone image-recognition technology used by the iPhone's software photo edit: "The Optic Nerve virtual lens can recognize an object, identify what it is, where it is in the image and provide a realtime indication if you are recording the image." You'll find the familiar menu/toolbar, buttons, and tools grouped into tool tabs. One of the big improvements is the new Content Aware Fill feature, which automatically fills in missing details in your subject. Unfortunately, it doesn't seem to recognize detail in figures as well as objects, so if you have a subject with a lot of detail, you may have to manually fill in the blanks. Despite these omissions, Content Aware Fill can do some cool things like scan large areas in minutes for photo editing. PC users still get a slightly different interface.
